

Family affair: Manuela Sultana with daughters Gabrielle, 14, and Isabella, 10.

Picture: Rob Duncan

Pastizzi sealed with a kiss

All Manuela Sultana's Kiss Kiss Pastizzi are sealed with, you guessed it, a kiss. An imprint of her own lips is the logo on the packaging and the name of the product is in honour of her late father Emanuel, whose nickname was Kiss Kiss. It's also tattooed on her back with a Maltese cross and angel wings as an expression of gratitude to a single dad who brought up three kids while driving long-haul trucks. She runs her business with her two daughters, Gabrielle and Isabella, who help with promotions and tastings.

Pastizzi are traditional Maltese flaky pastries with sweet and savoury fillings. They're the ultimate finger good with 13 flavours in the range, including "bonza bacon and ricotta", "cheeky chicken curry" and "awesome apple". Eat them on the go or serve with salad for lunch or dinner. Inquiries: 0422 280 823 or kisskisspastizzi@bigpond.com.